The world's capital cities have been the birthplace of many great musicians, and London, England, is certainly no exception. During the first decade of the 20th century two future Light Music 'greats' were born to parents who had originally sought refuge there from troubles in their homeland. David Rose was taken as a child with his family across the Atlantic to the USA where he would achieve world-wide fame for the unique orchestral sound he created, and which would influence many of his peers. Sidney Torch remained in England, and became a leading figure in Britain's musical scene. Both excelled at composing, arranging and conducting, as their contributions to this CD will surely testify.

Christmas Lights

The success of Guild's first collection of music associated with the Festive Season ("Christmas Celebration" GLCD 5185) has prompted this second compilation, arranged by some of the very best musicians working in Light Music. Somehow Christmas isn't the same without Festive Music, whether traditional carols or the popular melodies dreamed up by composers who know how to tear at our nostalgic heartstrings. Both categories can be found in abundance in this collection, which offers tasteful orchestral settings of some of the best-known carols from various countries alongside the catchy novelties that make Christmas such a happy time of the year. In the hands of the top arrangers and orchestras assembled on this CD, there is every chance that the discerning listener will discover some new sounds that add a welcome vibrancy to old, familiar friends.
