Production Music Of The 1940s

What is 'Production Music'? In simple terms it is music provided by publishers for use by professionals mainly in the entertainment business. Most of it is specially composed for the purpose, and some pieces may last only a few seconds. But there are many examples of light music cameos which have become popular with the public through their familiarity as signature tunes and in similar situations where they have been regularly heard. By the end of the 1940s the production music scene (in those days more commonly called 'mood music') was well established in Britain, and this collection contains examples by many of the finest composers working in this little-known corner of the music business.

A Light Music Smörgåsbord

One of the strengths of the English Language is its willingness to absorb words from other cultures when a direct alternative does not already exist. Few English speakers realise how many of the words they use every day actually originated elsewhere. Among these is Smörgåsbord which the dictionary defines as "Swedish hors d'oeuvres (another import!) or buffet meal with a variety of dishes." Translated into musical terms, it is the perfect word to describe this very varied collection. When thinking of Light Music there is a tendency to forget that the Scandinavian countries also have a fine tradition in this area of musical appreciation. The likes of Grieg and Sibelius are universally applauded: hopefully this collection will add some more names to this elite list.
